HITLER OPENS 'PEACE OFFENSIVE' IN SPEECH TO REICHSTAG TODAY; URGES SILENCING OF THE GUNS

Suggests Statesmen of Europe Meet in Sincere and Far-Reach- ing Conference to Settle Problems of Nationalities, Minor- ities, Raw Materials, Trade and Economic Matters—Also Germany's Lost Colonies in Africa.

(By Pierre J. Huss, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, Oct. 6—(INS)—Carefully avoiding the "threats" that Britain and France had predicted beyond hinting that the war in Europe might become a war of all the world, Reichs- fuerhrer Adolf Hitler launched his "peace offensive" in a speech to the Reichstag today proposing an international conference and limitation of armaments to a "security basis."

Opening of full hostilities on the western front, he said, can only mean a loss of millions of lives, with eventual restora- tion of a Franco-German boundary marked not by flourishing cities but by ruined towns and "gigantic cemeteries."

He urged that guns be silenced at least long enough to al- low the statesmen of Europe to meet in a sincere and far- reaching conference to settle problems of nationalities, minor- ities, raw materials, trade and economic matters and Germany's war-lost colonies in Africa.

The last, he said, is the only claim that Germany has against England, and force of arms is not needed to solve this problem.

Hitler announced plans to create a new Polish state based on ethnologic, economic and national factors which would also safeguard German inter- ests.

He proposed as well a solution of the Jewish problem.

The Fuehrer began his talk at 12:06 p. m. (6:06 a. m., e. s. t.).

The Reichstag was crowded to over- flowing with the 800-odd deputies of the Nazi regime.

Hitler reiterated his desire for friendly relations with England.

"Germany has no demands against England," he said, "with exception of the colonial problem—an issue that can be solved without resort to force."

Proposing a new economic order, re- organization of world markets and other measures to establish peace in Europe on a permanent, unshakable basis, the Fuehrer declared that Ger- many will guarantee to continue friendly relations with the Baltic and Scandinavian states, Holland, Bel- gium, Italy, Soviet Russia and others. "None has anything to fear from Germany," he said.

So far as France is concerned, the Fuehrer declared, Germany has no further grounds for dispute.

"The revisions of the Versailles Treaty that have been carried out can- not be changed again," he said.

Therefore the world is confronted with the question: "Why should war now occur on the western front?"

"The European conference," Hit- ler said in pleading for at least an immediate truce, "must meet without cannon thundering in its ears."

Urging re-establishment of inter- national confidence, the Fuehrer an- nounced that the Russo-German pacts proved that he has no designs upon the Ukraine and Rumania.

"General war would be a horrible catastrophe from which Europe would never recover," he said.

The Czech-Slovak state will remain permanent as it is, the Fuehrer said. Declaring that general hostilities in the west would "solve nothing," Hit- ler continued.

"The aim of the German govern- ment in the East is:

"First, creation of a Reich border based upon historical, ethnologic and economic conditions.

"Second, reorganization in accord- ance with nationalities and solution of minority problems.

"This refers not only to Poland but also to southern and southeastern Eu- ropean countries."

Anti-aircraft guns were much in evidence in the vicinity of the Kroll Opera House where the Reichstag met.

"Thirdly, an attempt to solve the Jewish problem.

"Fourth, reconstruction of economic life.

"Fifth, guarantees of the security of the entire territories involved.

"Sixth, creation of a Polish state guaranteeing it against re-establish- ment of hot-beds of intrigue against Germany and Russia."

This task is not an imperialistic one, Hitler said, but will keep Ger- many busy from 50 to 100 years.

"Our second problem," Hitler con- tinued, "is the restoration of Euro- pean security, to obtain which it is necessary first to clarify the foreign policies and aims of European coun- tries.

"Germany is ready to give a clear exposition of her foreign political aims which may be headed with the follow- ing declaration:

"The Reich no longer considers that the Versailles Treaty is in exist- ence." Consequently, the Reich has no cause for any further revision with the exception of the problem of colonial possessions.

"Our primary interest here is the return of former German colonies.

"Germany's colonial claim is based upon her legal right to participation in the natural resources of the world. This is no arbitrary claim backed up by force of arms, but a claim based upon political equality and economic reason."

Citizenship Lessons Interest The Sorosis

LANGHORNE, Oct. 6—"Lessons in Citizenship," in the form of a quiz, provided an instructive and enlighten- ing half-hour program for the Sorosis, in the library, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. George Staehle, chairman of the citizenship committee being in charge. A number of members of the women's club participated, answering queries on naturalization, immigration, Amer- icanization, etc.

The business meeting which pre- ceded, was the first of the season, with Mrs. James B. Rudhart presiding. A brief memorial period honored the late Mrs. Walter Shaw, who died this week; and the late Mrs. Ezekiel Pryor who passed away last Summer.

Three new members were welcomed into the club, Mrs. Leon Wenzel, Mrs. Robert Biltz, and Mrs. Theodore As- lakson. Chairmen of all committees outlined their plan of activity for the ensuing year.

Chairman of the Garden Section, Mrs. Paul Benneth, conducted a ques- tion and answer period entitled "Do you know?" which she plans to do at each meeting for a few minutes. In hope of having more women become herb-minded, Mrs. Benneth displayed many herbs which were labeled.

Delegates named to the Bucks County Federation meeting at Doylestown on October 27th, are Mrs. Blanche Hetherington, and Mrs. Edgar Frut- chey; and to the Pennsylvania South- eastern district sessions at Beaver College, Jenkintown, on the 30th of the month, Mrs. Paul Benneth and Mrs. Harry Rothelmer, with Mr. J. Leslie Ransom as alternate.

Excellent reports on the state fed- eration meetings held at Bucks Hill in May were presented by Miss Dorothy Rothelmer and Mrs. Harry Wil- liams, Jr.

"God Bless America," sung by Mrs. Frutchey, ended the program, with the members singing the chorus. Vi- olinist was Mrs. Hetherington, and pianist Mrs. Ernest Gamble.

Honor Pastor of Zion Church On His Birthday

The Ladies' Aid of Zion Lutheran Church, at their monthly meeting last evening, surprised the pastor, the Rev. P. R. Ronge, with a birthday party. Many cards, useful gifts and money were presented to the pastor. Refresh- ments were served by Mrs. May McLaughlin.

The women decided to provide re- freshments for 100 at the coming Ar- mistice Day celebration.

SPECIAL SERVICES TO MARK 70TH ANNIVERSARY

St. Luke's Evangelical Luther- an Church to Celebrate in Dublin

WEEK OF PROGRAMS

DUBLIN, Oct. 6—A week of special services to be held in St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church, here, starting on Sunday, October 8th, will mark the 70th anniversary of the organization of the congregation.

An informal service and reception of the Lutheran and Reformed con- gregations will occur on Wednesday evening; and on Sunday, the 15th of the month, the Reformed congrega- tion will hold a morning celebration; with the Young People's Society con- ducting a union anniversary service in the evening.

In connection with this anniversary year, the Lutheran congregation plans to install a new organ, but because it

Wilson Smith Highest In Card Party Listing

CROYDON, Oct. 6—The card party given by the eighth grade of Croydon school, Wednesday evening, was most enjoyable. The successful contestants were: Wilson Smith, 609; Alfred Stan- zell, 602; George Fleming, 577; M. Thomas, 565.

The next meeting of the Fathers and Mothers Association will be held October 18th, with a special entertain- ment by the committee in charge.

Health Officer Reports Case of Scarlet Fever

One case of scarlet fever is now under quarantine, Health Officer, James H. Brooks, reported to the Health Board, last night, at the regular monthly meeting of the Board.

Other diseases for which residences have been placarded include: Whoop- ing cough, 3; chicken-pox, 3; pulmo- nary tuberculosis, 2; broncho pneu- monia, 1. One case of dog-bite was reported.

Quarantine is in effect at present for three cases of whooping cough, one of chicken-pox and one of scarlet fever.

Forty-seven health certificates were renewed and one new certificate issued.

Three nuisances were reported. Two have been abated and the third was found not to exist.

The usual monthly inspection of dairies was made and sediment tests of milk taken.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

After 42 years on the New York Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, as a brakeman, flagman and freight conductor, Samuel A. Stokes, of 340 North Pennsylvania avenue, Morris- ville, is now on a pension.

Back in 1897, Stokes started as a brakeman and advanced to a flagman. At his retirement, he was a freight conductor on a wire train, a position he held for nearly 20 years. He re- calls only one serious injury to him- self while on the railroad, when he was knocked from a box car when hit by a "tell-tale," a warning chain that hangs near the entrance to tunnels.

Electrification, according to Stokes, is the biggest improvement on the railroads today. When he started there were no air brakes on trains.

Although retired now from railroad work, he contends he's "got plenty of work to do around the house."

Stokes, who will be 71 on October 18, has three children. They are: Earl, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Leighton Haines, of Newtown, and Mrs. Helen Slatter- beck, of Trenton. Born in Trenton, he moved to Morrisville about 30 years ago. Mrs. Stokes is deceased.

Perkasie Borough Council discussed the proposed revision of the electric rates, but took no final action last night. They did, however, decide to grant a $20 concession on the instal- lation rate for electric ranges, start- ing immediately.

Council also granted a request from Sellersville borough for the use of the equipment used in the W. P. A. real estate registry in Perkasie. The project has been completed in Perkasie and will get under way at once in Sel- lersville.

Announcement was also made that the W. P. A. street projects in Perka- sie will be discontinued until next Spring. Two blocks, one on Third between Arch and Race streets, and one between Third and Fourth on Race, will be completed this week and open for travel next Monday morning.

W. P. A. workers in Perkasie, it was reported, will all be transferred to the steam dredging projects under way in the vicinity. The projects, in- cluding Pleasant Run and North Branch of the Perkiomen, will con- tinue throughout the Winter months.

Hunting of game in Sellersville Bor- ough will be prohibited this Fall, ac- cording to an announcement made at the monthly meeting of Borough Coun- cil. For some years sportsmen have been permitted to hunt within the bor- ough limits, but some months ago an ordinance prohibiting the use of fire- arms in the borough limits was adopt- ed, and during the session last eve- ning it was announced that the ordi- nance will be enforced to the letter, the borough limits, and the police will be requested to see that the ordinance is enforced.

The Doylestown Forum will in- augurate its season tonight at the Fountain House in Doylestown at 8:30 o'clock, the subject under discus- sion to be "Should the United States assist England and France in the present war?"

No changes have been made in the rules for conducting the Forum from what they were last Spring, according to Albert A. Bliss, Jr., the chairman. The sessions are adjourned as close to

HOME AND SCHOOL LEAGUE MEETS AT TULLYTOWN

Enjoy Social Time Following The Usual Business Session

PLAN FOR NEXT MEETING

TULLYTOWN, Oct. 6—The regular monthly meeting of the Home and School League was held Monday evening at the school. The meeting was opened with singing, followed by re- citing the Lord's Prayer. The presi- dent, Mrs. Nichols, asked for the read- ing of the minutes by the secretary, Miss Dora Thompson, and the treas- urer's report by Mrs. Strouse. Sev- eral items of interest for future meet- ings were discussed.

Announcement was made that at the November meeting a representative from the Philadelphia Electric Com- pany will show moving pictures and give a talk on "Better Lighting in the Homes." Every one is asked to make a special effort to attend this meet- ing. After the business meeting, cards were enjoyed and refreshments were served.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

He Pulled The Plug

Washington, Oct. 5. THE effort to make it appear that the dis- banding by the President of the newly created War Resources Board, headed by young Mr. Stettinius, was normal, natural and involved no back- tracking on his part, has not stood the test very well. As a matter of fact, only the completely glibly ac- cepted it in the first place.

THE truth is that this board, an- nounced with a great fanfare of Administration trumpets, as de- signed to take the place of the old War Industries Board, has been shoved into the discard by the Left Wing group of Presidential advisers, who resented not having been consulted about its creation and disliked its personnel. It is simply another repetition of the confirmed Roosevelt habit of mak- ing a gesture in one direction and then being turned in the other.

IN the past five years this has happened so many times that it is surprising the gestures can still be made without evoking derision. Time after time, word has gone out that the President proposes to co-operate and encourage busi- ness; that he has approved an "appeasement program," that he is turning toward Conservative sources for advice. And every time business leaders hopefully respond. They come down to Washington, express their desire to co-operate and hover around for a few days or weeks until the inevitable kick in the pants is delivered. It has not once failed to happen. It has happened to the Stettinius board, just as it has happened to others, and no amount

Rotarians Conduct Forum At Weekly Meeting

An open forum on club business was held yesterday afternoon at the Elks' Home when the Rotary Club held its regular weekly meeting. President Thomas R. Jones was in charge.

Following the open forum, John O. Stiemmer, Metropolitan executive in this district, and member of the Rotary Club, talked on the second object of Rotary, "Community Service."

Stiemmer's talk was followed by a discussion participated in by Frank Willis, E. Leslie Helwig, and William Begley, Esq., on "Employer and Em- ployee Relationships."

Next week a representative of the DuPont Company will be the guest speaker. Announcement was made that a joint meeting will be held in Morrisville with the Morrisville club on November 9th. The Bucks County Rotary Union will be held November 30, the place of this meeting to be announced at a later date.

TAX RECEIPTS AT BENSALEM SHOW BOOST FOR SCHOOLS

Collections Reported As Being $3,000 Ahead of Last Year

ROUTINE REPORTS MADE

Permission Given Kings The- atre Guild to Use the Auditorium

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 6—School tax collections in Bensalem Township are more than $3,000 ahead of the same period last year, according to a report made to the Bensalem Township School Board when that body met in the High School here last evening for the first regular monthly meeting of the 1939-40 term.

This statement was made in the re- port of the treasurer, Oscar Schreiber, Schreiber said that he hoped that taxes would continue to come in for the re- mainder of the year in the same fash- ion. His report also indicated that all temporary loans made by the Board had been paid.

Routine reports and committee re- ports consumed the greater part of the meeting last evening. Schreiber, re- porting for the building and grounds committee, stated that all repairs to all buildings in the Township had been completed prior to school opening and that all equipment was in fine shape.

Permission was granted by the Board to the Kings Theatre Guild of Andalusia to use the high school au- ditorium on the evening of October 13th when a dramatic production will be presented.

George Cragg, chairman of the teachers and courses committee, re- ported that all teachers were back again this year and that their work was progressing smoothly.

The cafeteria committee's report, given by chairman Joseph Sharpe, indicated that this branch of the sys- tem at the High School was in excel- lent order. He reported to the Board the purchase of a new electric refrig- erator.

William Lange, chairman of the ac- tivities committee, gave a brief resume of the school events for September and presented the calendar for the present month. Athletic activities, in- cluding football and hockey games, were listed for the remainder of the month.

Superintendent of Schools, S. K. Faust, gave the nurse's and medical reports. No contagious diseases were reported. Members of the football team and hockey team were examined by the school doctor, according to the report.

L. L. Williams, chairman of the pur- chase and supplies committee, told the Board that all necessary supplies and equipment had been purchased.

All members of the Board were present for the initial session of the present term.

Couple Wed 50 Years; Have Surprise Affair

A surprise party was given Wed- nesday evening in honor of the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Librano Clarella, 347 Dorrance street. The affair was given by their children and grandchildren, including Charles Clarella, Mrs. Anthony Torano, Mrs. Frank Bomentry, Mrs. John Whyno, Mrs. John Russo, Mrs. Vitoria Bian- cosini, and Mrs. Chet Castor.

Present to wish them many happy years were five children and 25 grand- children.

Mrs. Clarella received many gifts, including flowers, and a gold cross and chain.

Refreshments were served. Mr. Clarella is a retired railroad employee.

Miss Hellings Serves As Card Party Chairman

The Young People's Fellowship of St. James' Church held a card party, Tuesday evening, in the parish house, Miss Edna Hellings was chairman, and there were 12 tables of players ar- ranged.

High scores in bridge were won by: Miss Grace Haas, 1368; Miss Staley, 1013; in "500": Mrs. William King, 2490; Mrs. George E. Boswell, 2100; pinocchio: Mrs. C. Hearn, 788; Mrs. Walter Downing, 743; Mrs. R. Hunter, 736; A. E. Granzow, 727; Mrs. William Foltz, 714.

Refreshments were served.

SOLDIER POSES AS TREE

NEW YORK—(INS)—A veteran of the war games at Plattsburgh, where 52,000 American soldiers went through highly artificial battles, tells this story:

A staff car was speeding down a side road when it was halted by an in- fantryman waving the branch of a tree.

"You can't go through here," the infantryman said. "I'm a fallen tree."

NEWPORTVILLE

Newportville Boy Scout committee will meet in the church basement to- night to review six boys. All new members are cordially invited.

THREE CENTURIES

The 300th anniversary of the introduction of printing into the American colonies is commemorated by the United States government in the issue of a three-cent stamp bearing a picture of the Stephen Daye Press, the first printing press to be used in this country. The original press still is in existence. It is the center of the Fifth Educational Graphic Arts Exposition at the Grand Central Palace in New York.

The antique is a loan from the Vermont Historical Society. It rests in quiet and at peace in the midst of a comprehensive display of the most modern and intricate printing machinery, much of it actually at work, but its silence is most eloquent of the spirit of the pioneers who employed printing as a weapon in the fight for human rights.

Many trades are interested in the observance of Printing Industry Week. It is a major industry but greater than the business itself is the impetus which printing has given to the development of mankind during the centuries since type was invented. No doubt there are those who will champion many other devices created by man as most vital to his progress, but printing, which made possible the first general intercommunication of thought between masses of mankind, has proved to be one of the most powerful agencies for the development of modern civilization.

A GOOD FIGHT

The smallest city which boasts a team in the major leagues is Cincinnati. It has been twenty years since the Ohio River town has had a pennant team, and it has been eleven years since the outfit emerged from the ruck of the second division. This season, in the baseball park which has the smallest seating capacity in the National League, the Reds have "packed them in" as they commanded the attention of the baseball fans of the nation, and for that matter of all other Americans who have a soft spot in their hearts for the "under dog."

Attendance at the games in Cincinnati has broken all-time records, the fight of the team against odds has aroused the admiration of baseball enthusiasts the country over. From last place to the front line trenches in two years, Bill McKechnie's "miracle men" have brought rejoicing to Redland.

Not only the players but the cash customers are "miracle men" in Cincinnati. Baseball experts look upon Cincinnati as one of the greatest baseball towns in the history of the sport, because of the loyal support which the residents give to their team, win or lose. That in itself ought to win a sympathetic attitude from the baseball spectators in every community.

A Boston daily tells the one about the backwoodsman who, informed there was a war, remarked, "Waal, they've got a good day for it." We expect to see many more of these V. J. F. W., or Veteran Jokes of Foreign Wars.

A day's accumulation of spectacular disasters is laid to man's insatiable hunger for speed. We can remember when the quick and the dead were different people.

History, past and present, tells us there can be little hope of world peace until all the corporals are promoted to sergeancies.

of face-saving palaver about the board being a temporary agency, which has served its present purpose by making a survey and report, alters the fact. It is said, too, that the board, which Mr. Roosevelt has disbanded, can easily be recalled and that the country being now at peace, the board would have nothing to do and should exist only in time of war.

ALL of which, as the Hon. Al Smith would say, is the bunk. None of it is in accord with the White House publicity which accompanied the announcement of the board. Nor with the inspired pieces from Administration journalists immediately following. While it was not explained why Mr. Roosevelt had passed over Mr. B. M. Baruch and others of the old War Industries Board, clearly the logical selections, the contention was that the personnel of the Stettinius board was a fine example of the President's determination to achieve "national unity," an indication of his desire to have around him in this crisis conservative men of experience, with whom he could consult and in whom he had confidence. Somewhat fulsome eulogies were penned about the members of the board and there was a distinct understanding of its permanency.

AND now, six weeks after its creation, it is being dissolved by Presidential order — of course, with the usual expressions of esteem. The board will make its "report." It will be thanked for its services and its feelings will be salved by misleading statements that this is all it was ever intended it should do at this time, and that it may be "recalled." These alibis, like the one that the President did not select these men himself and they were chosen entirely by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, deceive only the uninformed. The plain fact is that the board will not be recalled. The President pulled the plug, it has gone down the drain and there is elation and mirth in the Left Wing group.

FROM the day its personnel was announced, the Administration radicals have concentrated their fire on it and pestered the President about it. The connection of Mr. Stettinius with the Morgan firm was emphasized; the absence of a labor representative was stressed; the "reactionary character" of Mr. Hancock and others was pointed out; again the old plea of "don't let the people down" to which Mr. Roosevelt always reacts, was used. Further, it was said that the existence of the board would give color to the charge that Mr. Roosevelt planned to take the country into war, and had already set up his war machinery.

IN the end the board "got the gate" and the radicals rejoiced. It was an initial victory, it seemed to them, in the internal struggle of which group—Left or Right—is to dominate the Administration in the preparations for war—or in war itself. Had the Stettinius board remained in Washington, they suspected its influence would be in the ascendant. Their success in getting it out is a great relief. Its recall is not expected, but if war comes and the board does come back, they are confident its personnel will be greatly diluted. It is an illuminating incident.

"KNIGHT ERRANT"

by Jack McDonald

CHAPTER XV
Snapper's chin drooped and there was a faraway look in his eyes.

"I hope Flo Kane didn't get her bet down," he said, almost in an undertone.

Slim leveled two steely eyes at Snapper, and asked:

"How does Flo come in on this?"

Flo, a mutual friend, lived in Chicago. She had been a show-girl with a bit of talent, until all the curves of her once lithe figure started accumulating in one place. Now she had a small dress shop on Wilson avenue. She was one of that hard working "good fellow" type of girls.

Flo liked race track because they spoke her language, and her small place on the North Side was practically home to Slim and Snapper during the summer season at Arlington, Lincoln Fields and Washington Park. Slim valued her friendship.

"Come on now, Snapper, I want to know! What has Flo got to do with all this?"

"I . . . uh . . . I sent her a wire saying Knight Errant would win sure, and I . . . I signed your name to it," Snapper gulped.

Slim knew Flo trusted him. He knew, too, that she had a tidy little bankroll saved up, and a wire on a horse from him would have been like some mystic oracle from the gods.

"I was only trying to help her, Slim, honest I was," Snapper pleaded. "I figured Knight Errant was home free, and I knew she wouldn't hold still for a message from me, so I signed your name."

"It's quite with you and me, Snapper, when you start selling me down the river to a pal like Flo," Slim said between his teeth.

For the moment he meant it. He tore away from the stricken Snapper. Turning the clubhouse corner Slim had to stop short to avoid bumping into Heather Mills.

"Miss Mills," he blurted out dramatically, in spite of himself. "Knight Errant is a cinch today—to lose. Bassitt's betting on another horse in the race."

The glance from her blue eyes withered him. Later he would admit he never felt smaller in his life than in that moment when Heather answered without sarcasm, but with a gentleness that seared more than scorn.

"Knight Errant will lose? Thank you so much for telling me. You haven't been right about him yet, have you, Mr. Maynard? Or about my friend, Mr. Bassitt, either. I was planning only to bet five dollars on Knight Errant. Now I'll bet TEN!"

Slim stood frowning in thought on the clubhouse lawn at Bay Meadows. He was smarting under Heather's rebuke administered the moment before, but also he was cogitating.

Both Flo's bankroll and Heather's helplessness needed his defense and the combination of the two inspired him to heavy thinking. He looked about himself for some sort of inspiration.

His scowling glance fell upon cheery little Dimples Draper, Bassitt's rider, swaggering over the lawn on his way to the jockey's room. It occurred to Slim the boy was looking awfully high on himself.

Suddenly Slim's lean features broke out in a grin born of pure inspired mischief. He looked at his watch. It was more than two hours before post time for Knight Errant's race.

Slim hurried around the clubhouse in search of Snapper, who had been avoiding him in sorrowful reproach ever since Slim had told him "it's quite between you and me." He found Snapper leaning dejectedly against a post by the grandstand, the picture of a man without a friend.

"Hey, Snapper!" Slim called eagerly, forgetting that only a few minutes before he had ended their friendship forever.

The prospect of being back in Slim's good graces put wings on Snapper's feet as he raced over to join Slim.

"Snapper, do you know that Kid Draper personally?"

"Only that he rides like a park policeman," beamed the forgiving Snapper.

"And he doesn't know you?"

"Not from Adam's off ox. Why?"

"Never mind just now. You wait right here. I'll be back in a minute."

Slim dashed up the grandstand steps two at a time and over to the press box, where he asked Red, a telegraph operator, to do him a favor.

"I'm playing a little joke on a fellow," Slim explained, as he asked Red to type on a receiving blank what he told him. "Make it look official now, like a real telegram," he added.

Hurrying back to where Snapper was waiting, Slim asked him to read the "telegram from Louisville," addressed to "Snapper Elliot, St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco," and signed "Colonel F. G. Bradford."

The wire read:

"WORKHAM CANNOT MAKE WEIGHT ANYMORE SO NEED LIGHT YOUNG BOY FOR FIRST STRING RIDER STOP UNDERSTAND DRAPER IS TOPS ON COAST STOP LOOK HIM OVER AND IF SATISFACTORY SIGN HIM UP SALARY TEN THOUSAND YEAR PLUS BONUS AND LUNCH MONEY STOP MAKE SURE BOY IS GOOD TWO YEAR OLD RIDER."

"Now, hurry over and get to Draper before the judges start jostling around," ordered Slim. "Show him this wire and tell him if he puts up a good ride on Knight Errant this afternoon, you'll recommend him to the Colonel."

"And," Slim added, "if he doesn't tumble, start appealing to his vanity; that'll get that cheery little sprout."

"I get the idea," Snapper smiled, anxious to redeem himself in Slim's eyes. "Here's where I won't let you down."

Snapper caught Dimples Draper coming out of the jockey's room fifteen minutes later.

"Hey, Peewee," Snapper called. "Come here."

And Snapper pulled the "telegram from the Colonel" out of his pocket, saying:

"Read this. It just came this morning. I'm Snapper Elliot, Colonel Bradford's head scout."

Snapper thought Dimples' eyes would pop out at the thought of taking the great Workham's job. The jockey read the wire over twice.

"Think you could do it?" asked Snapper, and Draper nodded an emphatic yes.

"Well, I don't," roared Snapper. "The ride you put up on Little Eddie yesterday was terrible."

"Well, I won with him, didn't I?" Draper replied chestily.

"Yeah, but you let the horse get away from you after the race and the lead pony had to bring you back to the stands. And when you got back there, you'd lost your whip and couldn't even salute the judges."

And Snapper went on to point out that Colonel Bradford ran a high class stable and "wouldn't stand for any funny stuff."

"You riding anything this afternoon, kid?" asked Snapper, pretending to be indifferent.

"I'm riding a two-year-old named Knight Errant for Mr. Bassitt," answered Draper.

"Good," said Snapper. "You see what the telegram says about the Colonel wanting a good two-year-old rider?" and he pointed a finger at the portion of the wire referring to the matter.

Snapper surveyed the boy's baby face and told himself he had Draper about won over. But he pressed the argument.

"You know what it means, don't you, Draper? The big headlines riding in stake engagements. A shot in the Kentucky Derby with a live horse."

This was making a big impression, Snapper saw, and he allowed himself a short pause for it to seep through the boy's overswollen head.

"But I'm not promising you a thing. I'm going to be watching that kid, Screwball Butler, on Lightning Bug, too, I think he can out-ride you, anyway."

Draper's boyish eyes brightened.

"You mean if I out-ride Butler in the race I get the job?"

"I don't mean nothing else, kid," said Snapper. "Now let's see you get out there and do your stuff—like you'll be doing it for the Colonel if you win."

"I'm going to have a big strong pair of glasses on you, watching every move you make. Now I'll tell you how to ride this colt, Knight Errant. Hustle him right out of the gate. Give him one of those hurry-up rides."

The race is only five-eighths and he'll hold his top speed all the way over that short distance, so keep crowding him. You can't rush him too much. And say, kid, mum's the word. I don't want people to know I'm even in town."

And, unmindful that the race was being planned for him in the above manner; unmindful of Slim's anxiety and Heather's faith in him, Knight Errant was taking a pre-race snooze in his stall in the Bassitt stable, dreaming, perhaps, of romping home in visionary derbies.

"Draper fell for the gag, hook line and sinker," Snapper reported breathlessly to Slim after his pow-wow with the rosy checked rider outside the jockey room. "He's going to cross Bassitt and ride Knight Errant to win!"

Slim was skeptical. He had had only nominal faith in the success of his idea of tricking Draper in the first place. It was just one of those long shot fliers that seldom click.

"Draper will be sure to tell Bassitt everything when they get together in the paddock to saddle up," he warned Snapper. "He'll see right through our scheme and tell the jockey someone was trying to make a fool out of him."

Slim, however, was intrigued with the thought that he had something to look forward to, no matter how the race came out. If Knight Errant won he would be $5,000 to the good and Flo's bankroll would be benefited.

And if the colt lost, Slim's prophetic warning to Heather might open the way to her confidence.

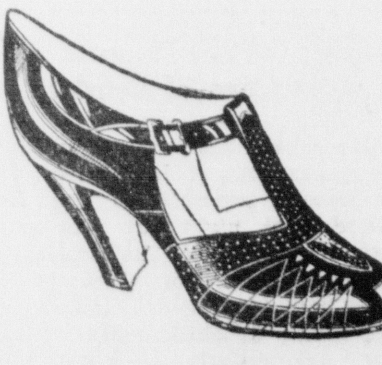

But, win or lose, the day held it's promise of thrills for Slim. It was a warm spring peninsula afternoon and Seabiscuit was to run in the feature race.

RECIPES

Those Which Interest Women

Orange Juice Hints

Number one drink is a tall class of chilled orange juice. This beverage is not only cold to the taste, it is cooling to the body, since vitamin C in which oranges abound actually mitigate the effects of heat. Only recently scientists at the University of Milan discovered that exposure to high temperatures caused a 50 per cent loss in vitamin C from the body tissues—and lowered vitamin C reserves go hand-in-hand with the tired feeling we get when the weather is hot. A glass of orange juice daily is thus good summer health insurance.

Not every one knows that it's important to serve orange juice fresh, just as one would make tea or coffee. The flavor of fresh juice is lost if it stands for even a short time and vitamin content decreases. The many mechanical and electric juice extractors now on the market make it easy to prepare juice as needed, while this summer's bumper harvest of small size California oranges is ideal for juice purposes. If you like your orange juice cold, put the fruit in the refrigerator for several hours before extracting juice. It will then be chilled without loss in flavor from ice dilution. California oranges are practically seedless, so that juice need not be strained.

Orange juice is the base for the following delicious drinks.

Minted Orange Juice: Put several sprigs of crushed mint in each glass of juice.

Orange Iceberg: Top glass of juice with a generous scoop of Orange Sherbet or a spoonful of vanilla ice cream.

Orange Banana Squash: Mash and beat a banana into a glass of orange juice. Sweeten and chill to taste.

Orange Sherbet

This recipe is simple to make and gives a sherbet of velvety texture.

Boil 1½ cups sugar and 1 cup water together for 5 minutes. Add slowly to 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Add 2 cups orange juice and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Pour into freezing tray and set cold control at fast freezing. Freeze stiff and beat or stir thoroughly. Return to freezing compartment and finish freezing. May also be made in crank type freezer. (Serves 8-10. Makes about 1 quart.)

Use Orange Sherbet to make meals more refreshing, as:

Accompaniment for the meat course or with wafers for dessert.

Topping for a fruit cup of fresh fruits, served for dessert.

Dressing for an individual fruit salad bowl.

Floater for orangeade, lemonade, fruit punch. Garnish with mint.

TASTEFUL TURNIP RECIPES

The turnip is a humble little vegetable with a flavor all its own—a flavor that some do not care for but many delight in. Plain mashed turnips appear regularly on thousands of tables and never seem to lose their charm.

But here are a couple of recipes that call for the humble turnip and allow it to step up a few rungs on the ladder of fame. Try them, ye turnip users, and you will have new ways to use your surplus turnips.

Turnips in Cream

8 turnips
2 cups milk
4 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons butter
Salt and pepper

Pare the turnips, cut them in small pieces, cook until tender. Make a white sauce of the flour, fat, milk and seasonings. Pour sauce over turnips and serve.

Turnip Shells or Cups

6 large turnips
Salt

Pare and remove the centers of the turnips, leaving a cup one-half inch in thickness. Cook shells in boiling water until tender. Just before cooking is completed, add the salt. Cook the centers in the same way and use for stuffing cups or serve as mashed turnips.

The turnip cups may be used as cases for creamed or buttered peas, beets, carrots, or any suitable vegetable or meat.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Life for a costume designer in Hollywood would be dull if screen stars didn't have fashion minds of their own. Most of the girls have set ideas they have nourished since babyhood and a costumer's best oratory won't sway them.

The only star we've ever known to change her mind was Bette Davis. When she first came to Warner Brothers she gave us carte blanche on her clothes except for necklines. Because her neck is slender she considered it her worst feature and wanted it covered up.

Finally came "Jezebel" and the script called for a gown of daring cut. An important sequence of the story hinged on a strapless gown. Bette gave in, wore the gown, won critical acclaim and no longer argues about necklines.

Ann Sheridan delivered herself into our hands for "Indianapolis Speedway" except for hats. She won't wear a hat of which she is conscious. It can not be the type that perches precariously on her head nor the style that has brim or trim which interferes with her vision. Her one and only chapeau love is the turban which she can wrap a dozen different ways with the greatest of ease.

Olivia de Havilland plays in so many historical films that she puts a strict taboo on period-influenced modern clothes when she plays in a modern story. She wants crazy 1939 hats, knee-length skirts, and all the streamlined trimmings. Our arguments that her figure is perfect for the revived bustle, bouffant skirts and snug waistlines fall on deaf ears.

Priscilla Lane won't wear tight skirts or more than one piece of jewelry unless the script specifically calls for it. She also has an antipathy to green. In "Four Wives" she is a very happy girl because she has three different blouse and skirt combinations. Margaret Lindsay and her young sister, Jane Gilbert, have the same idiosyncrasy. They must always have a white or cream shade next to the jewelry. . . . Jane Bryan prefers a face.

quarters" entertainment and education—the newspaper's daily line-up of features ranging from the amusing comics for children (and grown-ups) to household advice for mother, and the political inside for father.

Finally, the grandstand seat in the game of life, as reserved for you by the newspaper, seats you right in the middle of the most interesting market place in the world. For the daily newspaper is the medium through which the producers and purveyors of the goods you need to make life comfortable and happy, know they can best reach you with their advertising.

Papers for pennies! Read up and cheer!

...a Star on the playing field

An audience in the grandstand for a perfect view of the fascinating game of life the world round—an audience that knows no age limit, that encompasses every occupation and every income group, an audience that has wants and needs ranging the complete scale of commodities and services . . . that's the audience created by the daily newspaper for the advertiser, who has a perfect opportunity to play a starring role in the line-up every day.

Surrounded by the vital news of the world, the nation, the state, the home town, the message of the advertiser takes its place before the grandstand, assured of a fixity of attention and interest that can be provided by no other medium.

The prestige of the newspaper, a medium through which the entire populace achieves a grandstand seat in the game of life, is the prestige back of the advertiser's message when he appears in the line-up on the playing field.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

The bandit-ridden days of old Texas, before the Rangers were organized, are re-created in Columbia's "The Law Comes to Texas," which will star Bill Elliott at the Bristol Theatre, today.

The new film, in which lovely Veda Ann Borg returns to the screen, presents Elliott as a young attorney and veteran of the Mexican War assigned by the Governor of the State of Texas to investigate an early Texas law which prevented peace officers from following criminals across county lines.

Elliott disguises himself as a fugitive from justice and so joins a band of outlaws who have been taking advantage of the State law, harassing peaceful ranchers and holding-up stage coaches in one county, and then making their escape to another.

GRAND THEATRE

Yesterday's opening-day audience at the Grand Theatre found one of the most exciting moments in the thrilling 20th Century-Fox picture, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," the intense hand-to-hand struggle between the master detective and his arch-enemy, Moriarty, atop the Tower of London.

Holmes had just interrupted the master criminal in the super-crime of the century, the attempted theft of the British crown jewels. There is a novel story behind the screen fight that ensues.

The scene was filmed on the 20th Century-Fox set in a dense London fog, created by the prop department with atomized mineral oil.

RITZ THEATRE

Presenting the lucky seventh Hardy Family hit, "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," opens today at the Ritz Theatre with the family back home in Carvel.

Again Lewis Stone is seen as Judge Hardy, Mickey Rooney is Andy and all the rest of the family are present. Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, Sara Haden, Ann Rutherford. Two new members are Terry Kilburn, fresh from his triumph in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," enacting an annoying friend of Andy's, and Helen Gilbert, Hollywood's newest discovery, who plays the school teacher.

BRISTOL HIGH, BENSALEM TO CLASH AT CORNWELLS HEIGHTS

FIRST TIME TEAMS OF TWO SCHOOLS HAVE MET ON 'GRID'

Both Teams Have Been Preparing For This Contest

A CONFERENCE TILT Scrap Will Officially Open Lower Bucks Conference Season

For the first time in the history of the two schools, Bensalem and Bristol varsity grid aggregations will clash in a regularly scheduled football game when they tangle on the Owls' field in Cornwells Heights tomorrow afternoon.

Both teams have been preparing since early September for this important tilt and are now set, ready, and anxious to go at the opening whistle. The scrap will officially open the 1939 Lower Bucks Conference season, since it is the only fray of its kind on this week's grid slate.

However, while the skirmish will inaugurate the new pigskin campaign for the Cardinal and Grey lads, it will at the same time mark the second fray for the Owls, who opened their season last week by absorbing a 7-6 setback at the hands of Upper Moreland. The contest will also mark the official debut of Coach Tom Campion as head mentor at Bristol High.

Although but a few miles apart, the two schools have never enjoyed football relations until now when they will meet for the first time even though the two teams have been playing the game as a major sport for many years.

Among those who won their awards last year and who are again available for service at Bristol high this season are four linemen and a quintet of backs. In fact the entire potential starting backfield saw plenty of action last year.

Included among these is big Danny Dimidio, husky pile-driving back, who was selected on the All-Conference team last year for the second time. Besides being a fine ball carrier, Danny will also do most of the punting and passing and is a very good defensive man.

Others to return are Hardy Johnson, colored speedster, and Tony DiAngelo, another open field runner; Jimmy Orazi, a hard line-hitting back, and Boake Carter, who did much of the signal calling last year. Besides the signal-calling prospects coming up in Bob Baurath, Pete Spezzano, and Lou Galziano, especially in Baurath.

Two ends, a tackle, and a center, are among the outstanding linemen to return. The pair of flankmen, both of whom were rated high in the conference last year, are "Little Joe" Pica, and rangy Steve Florito, both fine defensive men and good pass receivers. Joe Dugan, a substitute last year, will understudy again and will no doubt see plenty of action.

The other duo of varsity linemen back are "Chart" Tomlinson, center, and John Cocordas, tackle. Tomlinson, selected on the second All-Conference outfit a year ago, will have the position over the ball all to himself this year, with no competition at all. He is a good line backer on defense and can open holes on the offense. Cocordas is one of the three big tackles on the '38 squad to return. He will probably team up with the inexperienced, but big, Joe Fallon at the other post although Mike Mannocchi also is in on the battle and may squeeze Fallon out.

Both guard spots were left wide open by graduation. Right now John Perry and Clem Peterpaul have the inside track for those berths on the starting eleven, although both are being pushed to the limit by Walt Vasey, John Ruscin, Carman Cialella, and Ted Sak.

The line was hard hit of its starting players from the '38 team, with such stars as Wilbur VanLenten, son of a former coach, and Wilmer White, flashy end, all of whom placed on the All-Conference first team last year, are lost to the '39 team. Besides that, such men as Harrison Fisher, colored tackle; Wall Lackawitz, guard; the Mansman brothers, Lou and George, and Charles Ruscin have all departed. The Mansman brothers, along with Francis Moon, a fine prospective fullback, transferred to Fallsington this year, while the rest graduated.

In the backfield, the squad lost the services of its ace quarterback, Tom Collier; triple-threat ace, Bill Gallagher; and another star line plunger and blocker, Vince Proff.

Bristol has been drilling hard for its opening tilt with Coach Campion and Assistant Coach Howard "Gus" Gushard, who is taking care of the line this year. They have looked good in practices, especially in the scrimmage against Abington here two weeks ago, and are anxious to take the first step toward two of their objectives—the Conference title and a better than 500 season—in the Bensalem game.

On the other hand, Coach George Reimer's boys have also been priming themselves for this all-important clash on their 1939 schedule. Ever since their opening day of practice it has been the watch-word here of "Beat Bristol," even overlooking their opening tilt with Upper Moreland last week.

Coach Reimer's boys are in pretty good physical shape and with the return of Al Despo in the backfield, they should be strengthened at least with a good substitution or two extra. What's more, the Owls' offensive attack clicked well for its opening contest against Upper Moreland last week, and if Bristol can't stop it any better than Upper Moreland did, they may find themselves on the wrong end of the score. After losing their opening on a tough break, the Owls and Coach

SERIES' FIRST HOMER — PROPERTY OF THE YANKS

Babe Dahlgren, Yankee first baseman, crosses the plate in the fourth inning of second World Series game against the Cincinnati Reds at Yankee Stadium, New York City, scoring on his homer. This was the first home-run of the series and the fourth run of the day for the Yanks, who took their second straight game, 4-0. Ernie Lombardi, catcher for the Reds, looks a bit discouraged.

Reimer are anxious to get this one in the win column.

Bristol may also have the damper on them by the injury list. At least they will go into the tilt with such stars as Danny Dimidio, Steve Florito, Joe Pica, and "Chart" Tomlinson under physical care, for all have been treated for injuries this week. While the injuries aren't to the extent of forcing them to the sidelines for this game, they will be working under a handicap.

BENSALEM GIRLS UPSET BUCKINGHAM

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 6.—Coach Helen Smith's Bensalem Owl girls pulled the strings on the Buckingham Doe girls by upsetting them in a surprise victory, here, yesterday afternoon, 2-1.

Champions of the circuit for the past two years, Buckingham had never been beaten during those seasons in which the Lower Bucks League came into existence although it had previously existed in myth. Up to yesterday, coach Matrona Walck's girls had won 13 straight victories but were held to a 1-1 tie by Newtown last season.

Matching the swift action of their opponents through the first half during which time neither team scored although Buckingham missed an opportunity to push one in, the Owlets started fast in the second half, and in short order they had rung up two rapid-fire tallies to assume a 2-0 advantage. However, the Doe girls hadn't given up hope and came right back with one of their own. But from that time on, the action was confined to mid-field play through the last five or six minutes of the ball game.

Thus the Owlets had built up a sufficient advantage to enable them to stave off a late rally by Buckingham to win.

Shortly after the whistle started proceedings resuming in the second half, the Owl girls had struck to push in the first tally of the fracas.

After the Doe girls had taken the ball into enemy territory, Bensalem's defense came up to snare the ball and immediately passed it up to the forward line. Eleanor Hughes, brilliant little center forward, and Naomi Foster, star left inner for the Owlets, took things into their own hands. They passed the ball back and forth in and out past the invader's secondary, then past their defensive backs, where within the striking zone, Hughes shot a fine pass to Foster, and the latter promptly laid the stick to the sphere to send it whizzing by Buckingham's goalie, Dot Beck, from approximately 5 yards out from the net.

Hardly had the "pace-off" or "bully," as it is called in field hockey, taken place when the Owlets were off to Buckingham's goal again. And once again it was the fine combination of Eleanor Hughes and Naomi Foster who collaborated brilliantly in securing the home team's second corner.

Hughes intercepted a Buckingham inner pass just past the mid-field marker and started a solo dash up the center of the field. In sparkling fashion she drew the Doe girls' secondary out of position, dribbled past them and on into the fullbacks. When the latter came out to meet her, she quickly shot the ball across to her left to Foster, who dribbled in to within a yard or so of the goal and fired a wicked shot toward goalie Beck, who had no chance to prevent the scoring of the point at all.

After taking possession of the ball from the pace off only to lose it, Buckingham regained it again past the mid-field line. Their forward wall then went into high gear and with some fine passing, succeeded in pushing it up into Bensalem's striking zone where the two clubs engaged in a wild scrimmage in front of the Owlets' net. Finally, Florence Crowell, left inner for Buckingham, picked the ball out of a mass of sticks, and from close range fired it into the goal past both Dot Cairns, who was making a fine effort to stop the Bucks' thrust, and goalie, Thelma Vandegrift, who had no chance to make a save on the play.

Buckingham's golden opportunity to score first came in the opening half, but they failed to cash in on it. Mainly through the brilliant efforts of Jane Cotton, center forward, and Florence

Crowell, Miss Walck's forward line gained possession of the ball and raced p the field passing the pill back and forth across the field with Crowell and Cotton leading the offensive. But Cotton, a bit too anxious to score, shot from 5 yards out. Thelma Vandegrift came out, snatched the ball, and tossed it away. The Owl girls then took the ball and the only threat of the initial half was over.

Dot Ely, Bensalem's star right wing, was on the sidelines with a badly sprained hand, the result of being struck by a club in practice. Her absence was evidenced in the work of Bensalem's squad although Funke, who took her place did a good job as well as Lange, a substitute later for Funke.

Dot Cairns, Bensalem's left fullback, fell down during the scrimmage in which Buckingham scored, and al-

THREE LOWER BUCKS ELEVENS TO STAGE TILTS THIS WEEK-END

Newtown and Bryn-Athyn Teams to Meet Today at Newtown

N. J. S. D. VS. LANGHORNE

Morrisville To Play Trenton High School Under The Arc Lights

The feature grid tilts this week-end in addition to the Bristol-Bensalem fray, include three games today involving Lower Bucks schools and one of a Bux-Mont outfit. They are the Newtown-Bryn Athyn game at Newtown, and Langhorne-New Jersey School for the Deaf scrap at Langhorne this afternoon. The other pair of contests will be staged under the arc-lights, with Morrisville engaging Trenton High at Dunn Field in Trenton.

None of the four teams of the Lower Bucks Conference, who opened their 1939 grid campaign last week, fared so well, with only one school being able to score a touchdown. That was Bensalem, and they were beaten, 7-6.

But Morrisville and Langhorne were both snowed under by big scores, losing to Downingtown, 32-0, and Mt. Holly, 34-0, respectively. Newtown, though held scoreless, was able to hold a superior Flemington outfit to a zero in the tally column also, to gain a draw which wasn't bad at all.

Coach Allen Tomlinson's boys should have a real scrap with Bryn Athyn who beat the Indians last year in a thriller, 21-15. But it looks as though the Bishops have too much power in a veteran combination for Newtown to reverse last year's setback, Friday afternoon.

Langhorne is still apparently too weak to knock off another veteran team of Mutes from the Deaf School of New Jersey, coached by Fred Burbank. The West Trenton boys were shellacked by Langhorne last year, 25-0, but appear ripe enough to knock off the Redskins tomorrow.

Morrisville will, more than likely, still be seeking its initial victory following Friday night's fray with Trenton, who should have little trouble in bowling over Coach John Hoffman's weak and inexperienced Bulldogs.

Lower Bucks Conference Grid Schedule for 1939

Sat., Oct. 7—Bristol at Bensalem
Fri., Oct. 13—Bensalem at Newtown
Fri., Oct. 20—Newtown at Bensalem
Sat., Nov. 4—Bristol at Langhorne
Sat., Nov. 4—Bensalem at Morrisville
Fri., Nov. 17—Bensalem at Langhorne
Thurs., Nov. 23—Bristol at Morrisville
Thurs., Nov. 23—Langhorne at Newtown

*This game will be officially recognized as a conference tilt in the entire circuit, but will not be recognized as such in the battle among the "little three" group for the "Big Brown Jug."

NEW YORK — (INS) — Jacob Feinstein, 56, say that he supports his wife and child by singing in backyards. Which is all right with Magistrate Henry H. Curran as long as he doesn't use the three-foot megaphone he had been menacing ear drums with. Magistrate Curran released him in court recently with that proviso.

BELIEVE YARDLEY HAS DROPPED FROM LEAGUE

A short meeting of the Bucks County Independent Football Conference was held last night at the Diamond meeting room, Andalusia. The Yardley Collegians were not represented and did not post a forfeit and so it was taken for granted that they did not wish to enter the circuit.

The remaining three clubs decided to go through with the schedule, hooking independent games in place of Yardley. It is most likely that next season Doylestown and Sellersville will come into the loop and with the addition of another club from this section, a six-team league will be formed. The teams that remained in the league are: St. Ann's A. A., Falls Township Alumni, and Joe Diamanti's Diamond team. In the season's opener Sunday, Falls Alumni and St. Ann's will clash on the Bristol Pike, near Morrisville, opposite the Warner sand pits.
